Objectives

- Identify how moods affect behaviour, decisions and performance
- Integrate the energy of emotions to get the best possible outcomes
- Apply emotions to decision-making to build long-term, trusting relationships with colleagues and customers
- Understand how emotional intelligence can assist us in times of stress and isolation

Langley Group

3

Impact of emotions

Langley Group

4

Three key points about emotions

- We all have moods and emotions
- Our moods and emotions impact our decisions, behaviour and performance
- The changes in us impact those around us

Langley Group

5

Emotions are data

Emotions are data. They tell us information about our own and others' reactions to situations.

Emotions on their own are neither good nor bad.

How we decide to behave, as a result of our emotions, is what we consider as being either emotionally intelligent or not.

Langley Group

6

EI Defined

“Emotional intelligence is the ability to monitor one’s own and others’ feelings and emotions, to discriminate among them, and to use this information to guide one’s thinking and action” - Salovey and Mayer, 1990

“It is the capacity for recognizing our own feelings and those of others, for motivating ourselves, and for managing emotions well in ourselves and in our relationships”
- Daniel Goleman, 1998

MSC Model of EI

Perceiving Emotions

- accurately identify own and others’ emotions

Using Emotions to Facilitate Thought

- generate emotions to solve problems

Understanding Emotions

- causes and changes of emotions

Managing Emotions

- integrate emotional data to make ideal decisions towards an outcome

Langley Group

9

MSC Model of EI

- What emotions are you, and others, experiencing?
- How are these emotions directing and influencing thinking?
- What causes these emotions? How might these emotions change?
- How do you manage your emotions and others’ emotions?

Emotional Triggers

An emotional trigger is a person, situation, event (or any external stimulus) that provokes a strong emotional reaction.

What are your emotional triggers?

Langley Group

20

The Impact of Emotions

Universal causes

- Sadness – something has been taken away
- Fear – being physically or psychologically threatened
- Happiness – things are working out
- Anger – something / someone is standing in my way
- Disgust – something / someone is being offensive

Using emotions effectively can enhance decision making

Different emotions can help with different types of problem solving.

Positive moods help with creative tasks. More original; generate a greater number of arguments / options. More receptive, more 'big picture', positive

Neutral or slightly negative moods result in a more careful, systematic, bottoms-up approach; better quality arguments. More closed, detail oriented, focus on what won't work.
